Demise of the male Y?

HEALTH Women may be mocked as the "weaker sex," but the Y chromosome that makes a guy a man is shrinking and may disappear in the future, say the authors of a new paper chronicling the Y's demise.

The number of genes the Y carries is growing smaller — so small that evolution, at some point, will likely think it too insignificant to maintain.

Ministry of Health to probe response time in 9-1-1 call

In a surprising turn-around, Toronto has asked Ontario's Ministry of Health to investigate the EMS response to the 9-1-1 call regarding Jim Hearst.

On Tuesday, Toronto Emergency Medical Services chief Bruce Farr said his service would be conducting an internal review of the June 25 call and EMS response at Hearst's Alexander Street apartment building.

But in a brief statement Thursday the city said the province will now be handling the probe. City officials would not say why the province was suddenly called in.

Ministry spokesperson David Jensen said the investigation will explore all matters relating to the EMS response, and a final report will be made to the city.

He pointed out the ministry conducts about 200 investigations a year on ambulance services across the province, 20 per cent of them at the request of municipalities.

In the Toronto case, witnesses say it took at least 30 minutes for EMS to attend to Hearst despite three, perhaps four 9-1-1 calls. He fell and hit his head before or after his heart attack.

The delay sparked concerns over reduced EMS staffing during the city workers' strike. Under an essential services agreement EMS is running at 75 per cent staffing. But Farr said the response time was not related to the labour disruption.

He said the paramedics attended the scene within acceptable response times — nine minutes in this case — but waited outside the building for police to arrive because they had "health and safety" concerns.

Man grieves loss of wife, son in Tehran plane crash

Vahik Khachik's three-year-old son was off to see his grandmother in Armenia for the first time and his wife was going to plan a family party when he waved goodbye to them Wednesday at the airport in Tehran.

Nana Antashyam

But before he even had time to drive home, news that their plane had crashed came over the radio.

The Toronto man is now left mourning the family he lost with no word on why the Caspian Airlines jetliner came down just 16 minutes after take-off.

Edward Khachik

Nana Antashyam, 35, was flying to Armenia with their son Edward so he could meet the rest of his extended family.

Khachik is devastated by the loss and has spent the last day in an emotional haze, said longtime family friend Garbe Andishian.

"He is crying for his wife and kid and we're trying to comfort him," Andishian said from the Khachik residence in Tehran. "The family is in very bad shape."

The cause of the crash was not yet known. Investigators have recovered two of the three black boxes belonging to the jetliner.

New bill to get tough on auto theft

Conservative and Liberal leaders expect new laws will be in place this fall to stop vehicles stolen in the GTA from being shipped abroad. When passed, Bill C-26 will add a new offence to the Criminal Code for theft of a motor vehicle. Mandatory prison sentences will accompany a third conviction. Altering a vehicle identification number would become an offence. The bill would also allow the Canada Border Services Agency to prevent cross-border movement of property obtained through crime. # Where's the heat?

Canadians who have been left shivering in their shorts, wondering what happened to summer may soon get their answer.

Environment Canada senior climatologist David Phillips says most Canadians from Banff, Alberta to Botwood, Newfoundland have been asking the same thing: "Where's the heat?"

Phillips says if July ended now, it would be coldest July on record in the Prairies.

But the climatologist notes July isn't over and new forecast models released Thursday suggest the sizzle could still come back into summer.

He says the models are showing warmer than normal or near normal temperatures for most of the country from mid-July to mid-August — no area is showing cooler than normal temperatures.

Phillips says there is room for optimism, but he cautions the weather is "notoriously fickle" and can change.

10 camps affected by flu-like symptoms

Flu Outbreak

With at least 10 summer camps now affected by outbreaks of flu or respiratory illness parents are being urged to keep children home if they show any signs of sickness.

Health officials say 10 Ontario camps have confirmed or suspected outbreaks of mild H1N1, respiratory illness or flu.

Dr. Arlene King, Ontario's chief medical officer, said up to 25 per cent of children at some camps have been affected, which is unusually high.

Parents, she added, can play a major role in controlling the spread of the virus. "We all have a responsibility to prevent getting infections into the camps," King said, emphasizing the importance of hand washing.

"Less than 1 per cent of camps have had documented outbreaks, so put that into perspective," said Dr. Michael Gardam, director of infectious disease prevention for the Ontario Agency for Health Protection and Promotion.

He noted there are at least 300 summer camps in the province.

$300M to limit Via delays from T.O. to Montreal

TRAVEL Ottawa is committing $300 million to what's being hailed as the largest-ever investment in passenger rail service between Montreal and Toronto.

Via Rail's CN Kingston Subdivision Project is a series of infrastructure improvements at eight locations along the 539-kilometre, double-track rail line.

The project is expected to boost capacity on the rail line by eliminating bottlenecks and reducing delay-causing conflicts between passenger and freight trains.

Sections of new third line track will be added to the existing line at multiple locations between Oshawa and Brockville.

A fourth track will be built at Via's busy Belleville, Ont., station.

Donald Wright, Via's chairman of the board, is calling Thursday's announcement "nothing short of a reshaping of the Canadian railway map."

Cops cleared in shooting incident

SIU Two Toronto police officers have been cleared of wrongdoing in the April shooting of a 38-year-old man.

The Special Investigations Unit concluded the officers were right to shoot the man twice after he slashed one officer in the forearm and forehead with a knife.

On April 2 officers responded to an apartment at 30 Eppleworth Rd. where a man was "attempting to kill a woman," said the SIU.

Police shot the man twice, inflicting extensive injuries.

The man has since recovered. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

BUST A 30-year-old Toronto man and a 28-year-old man from Marmora have been charged after OPP discovered over $100,000 worth of marijuana during a RIDE checkpoint in Mississauga.

OPP officers were conducting a RIDE checkpoint Tuesday on the westbound QEW off ramp to Dixie Road. The officer immediately detected the odour of fresh marijuana, and a number of marijuana plants were seen in the rear of the vehicle, police say. Police seized over 148 marijuana plants, with a street value of $148,000. Brian Carvalho, 30 and Sean Wilson, 28, are facing charges.

Non-union staff struggle

Workers facing 12-hour days

They work long hours, their gloved hands outstretched towards a ceaseless stream of cars as city residents line up to dump their trash.

"We are here seven days a week; vacations are cancelled," said one of 3,000 workers reassigned from their regular job to handle garbage at drop-off sites as the city-wide strike continues.

The worker, like the others interviewed for this article, did not wish to be identified.

In addition to handling garbage, non-union city staff and managers are working in social services, operating animal shelters, cleaning city facilities, working in men's shelters and staffing water treatment plants to ensure the city's supply is up to standards.

While there are no hard and fast rules about how long people have to work at the temporary jobs, those at the garbage sites typically work 12-hour days. For most, that means a serious lack of a personal life and a lot of sore muscles. One worker has lost 12 pounds.

12 The average worker is putting in a 12-hour day at their temporary job the non-union reps claim.

City spokesperson Kevin Sack said some staffers at water treatment plants have been "practically living in there" since the strike began. "You can't take any kind of a chance at being delayed by a picket line." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Security officers keep their eye on striking workers playing cards. A stand-off is heating up at a city run social services centre in Etobicoke in the Hwy. 27 and Dixon Road area. Some city workers want to cross the picket line and strikers bar them every morning. In the afternoon there is a detente where strikers line one side of the road and the potential scabs line the other.

Miller to recall city councillors

MEETING Toronto city council may soon meet — but not to discuss the civic workers' strike or whether to roll back councillors' 2.42 per cent pay raise.

Instead, Mayor David Miller announced yesterday he's looking at a meeting in the next week or two to handle business left hanging when the strike began June 22.

Meeting

- Miller needs at least 23 out of the 45 members to hold a meeting.

The strike prompted cancellation of a council meeting scheduled for July 6-7. Miller wants to resolve items that can't wait until August or September — including cancelling some Caribana rental fees and beginning an overhaul of the Milliken water pumping station and reservoir.

Under council procedures, the mayor can call a special meeting with 24-hours notice.

Disease reversed in mice

Muscular dystrophy breakthrough 'light at the end of tunnel'

It's a breakthrough that has made top Toronto muscular dystrophy researcher Christopher Pearson almost giddy with hope.

"There's light at the end of the tunnel, which freaks me out," the senior Hospital for Sick Children scientist says of research that shows a new way to attack myotonic dystrophy, the ailment's most common form, at its genetic root.

"I've been (working on) this for over 10 years and I didn't think I'd see it in my lifetime. But it's happening."

What's "happening" is contained in a University of Rochester study — headed by neurologist Dr. Charles Thornton— published yesterday in the journal Science, suggesting the wasting, muscle-locking effects of myotonic dystrophy can be reversed by combating it at the DNA level.

Myotonic dystrophy attacks one in 7,500 people in North America, and as many as one in 400 across regions of Quebec.

Symptoms include involuntary tightening of the hands and limbs and progressive muscle wasting that can erupt in childhood and span decades.

Thornton's team injected a potential new miracle molecule into the muscles of mice genetically manipulated to mimic the human disease.

The rodent muscles not only ceased their deterioration, but actually returned to normal function, Thornton says.

The research has sparked new hope for Toronto's Robert Harrison, 48, whose body has become more and more immobilized since he was diagnosed 13 years ago.

"Any breakthrough gives me hope that it can help me out," says Harrison.

Thornton says the major challenge now is to devise a delivery system that can bring the molecule to afflicted muscle, heart and central nervous system tissues. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

ESL students planned to leave group: Police

Three teenage exchange students from China missing since Tuesday never intended to reunite with their school group at Woodbine Beach, police said yesterday.

"We're shedding some light on the fact that it had been planned — that the three had decided not to meet back with the group," Const. Wendy Drummond said. "We can't get into where that information comes from … but we have evidence that it was planned."

When asked whether Zhiyong Chen, 17, Qian Hu, 15, and Kangjun Fu, 13, might have taken off to claim refugee status, Drummond said she could not comment on what the students' motives were.

The three Mandarin-speaking teenagers arrived from Changsha City, Hunan Province, on July 7 for a four-week ESL program run by the Toronto District School Board. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Fix privacy shortfalls or risk court action, report warns

The writing is on the wall for Facebook, the popular social networking site: Do more to protect the privacy of Canadian users or face the threat of court action.

Privacy commissioner Jennifer Stoddart posted that message for all to see Thursday in a report that warns the personal information of Facebook members may be at risk.

Facebook, with nearly 12 million Canadian users, allows people to keep in touch with friends and family by updating their pages with a stream of fresh messages and photos.

Stoddart said Facebook breaches federal privacy law by keeping users' personal information indefinitely — even after members close their accounts.

Ottawa stuck with deficit until 2019, report says

FORECAST Ottawa is on track to add $200 billion to the national debt over the next few years and will take at least a decade to balance the budget, a new paper says.

The analysis from Toronto-based Dale Orr Economic Insight adds to the growing body of opinion that the government's current plan to eliminate the deficit in four years isn't tenable.

The problem is that after 2011, the baby-boom generation begins to turn 65 and leave the labour force, reducing potential economic growth and adding to demands on government to pay for pensions and health care.

Mexico hits back

Canadian officials need visas, tourists exempt

Mexico has hit back in the visa dispute.

Retaliating against Canada for imposing new visa requirements on Mexicans, it says Canadian officials and diplomats will now need visas to enter Mexico.

But tourists are exempt.

Mexican Foreign Secretary Patricia Espinosa announced the move at the State Department in Washington, where she held talks with Foreign Minister Lawrence Cannon and U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Espinosa said Mexico would not force Canadian tourists — who number 1.3 million a year and are vital to the Mexican economy — to get visas to visit.

She and Cannon both said they were hopeful a resolution to the diplomatic spat could be reached quickly.

Canada on Tuesday began requiring visas from travellers from Mexico and the Czech Republic. Canada acted after authorities determined that the number of false refugee claims from the two countries was inordinately high.

That led to a rush on visas in Mexico City: about 100 Mexicans desperate to get their papers in place camped out overnight Tuesday at the Canadian embassy, with those numbers swelling to about 1,000 by Wednesday.

Tourists, refugees
Mexico provides both

- Mexico was the sixth-largest source of tourists to Canada last year with 266,000 visitors.
- Mexico is also the largest source of refugee claims in Canada — 9,400 last year, with only 11 per cent deemed legitimate.

Women ski jumpers appeal Games ban

OLYMPICS Women ski jumpers have filed an appeal that keeps alive their chances of taking part in the 2010 Winter Olympics.

"It's not over," said Deedee Corradini, president of Women's Ski Jumping USA and spokesperson for the group.

Last week, the B.C. Supreme Court ruled it couldn't force the International Olympic Committee to allow the women to jump.

Ross Clark, the lawyer representing the women, said the appeal will be based on the argument that VANOC must host the Games in accordance with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. "It cannot host events on Canadian soil that implement discrimination," Clark said.

Toll soars in testing scandal

CANCER The toll from Newfoundland and Labrador's breast cancer testing scandal has grown.

Officials revealed 425 patients had their breast cancer tests botched, 39 more than previously thought.

The health officials released an update after discovering last month the tests of 65 patients were overlooked in a review of tests done over an eight-year span.

Health authorities also said 127 patients whose tests were botched have died, an increase of 19 since March 2008.

Bombings to get worse, EnCana warned in letter

Energy giant told to shut down B.C. operations

Energy-giant EnCana has been given an ominous warning in a letter from a purported bomber.

The letter says EnCana has three months to start shutting down its oil and gas operations in northeastern B.C. or a recent series of bombings will "get a lot worse."

The two-page hand-written note, sent to the Dawson Creek Daily News, promises there will be no attacks until the three-month deadline runs out.

"You have three months to convince the residents here and the general public that you will commit to this program, meaning that all action against you will cease for three months from the time of this note," says the letter.

"We can all have a summer vacation including your security personnel and the RCMP, who have not helped you to date anyway."

"You are indeed vulnerable, can be rendered helpless despite your megafunds, your political influence, craftiness and deceit in which you trusted."
Letter to EnCana

The newspaper received the letter Wednesday and forwarded it to the RCMP.

The letter calls the first six explosions, which began last October and included two this month, as "minor" and "fully controlled."

It says the attacks are meant to send a message.

"To let you know that you are indeed vulnerable, can be rendered helpless despite your megafunds, your political influence, craftiness and deceit in which you trusted," it says.

It's the second letter to surface connected to the bombings.

The first, received last October just before the first set of three explosions, called EnCana and other companies "terrorists" and demanded they shut down immediately.

The latest letter doesn't specify the exact area EnCana must leave, but does mention the company's "fancy gas plant" at Kelly Lake.

The RCMP's anti-terrorism unit has been investigating the bombings, but so far no one has been charged.

ALIMONY The former lover of a Montreal multimillionaire has lost her court bid to get the same benefits as a married person who separates.

The couple, who can't be identified, lived together for years and had three children before they split.

The woman had been seeking a monthly payment of $56,000 for herself, a lump sum of $50 million and a share of the family estate.

But a Quebec judge has ruled she is entitled to the $34,000 a month she currently receives in child support.

Privacy worries in Greece

Greece's parliament has approved measures allowing police to use surveillance camera footage and create a DNA database, angering opposition parties that say the new powers will trample on people's privacy.

The measures by the conservative government follow massive riots in December and a surge in bombings and shooting attacks by domestic militant groups.

Parliament late Wednesday also approved a proposal that will oblige prepaid mobile-phone users to register their identities by June 30, 2010.

Under the new measures, street camera footage and audio will be stored for seven days, while DNA samples will be collected from suspects in all criminal cases "when there are serious indications the person in question has carried out the offence."

If acquitted, the suspect's DNA evidence will be destroyed, but if they are convicted, DNA profile data will be stored in a police database for the rest of their life.

China expects riot arrests soon

XINJIANG An initial investigation into ethnic riots that left 192 people dead in China's restive Western region has been completed and arrest warrants will be issued soon, the chief prosecutor for Xinjiang said Thursday.

Chinese authorities also got more aggressive in blocking foreign media from working in the streets of Urumqi, the regional capital where the July 5 riots occurred.

Foreign photographers who tried to shoot pictures of the thousands of troops guarding the city were told to put down their cameras and leave the area. Security forces even demanded that a group of journalists stop taking photos of a camel and a man who was playing a traditional string instrument near the main bazaar, a major tourist site, because troops were nearby.

Man, oh, man!

Sorry guys, your chromosome has no future, scientists say

Women may be mocked as the "weaker sex," but the famous Y chromosome that genetically makes a guy a man may well disappear in the future.

Researchers say it could take several million years — but that's lightning fast by evolutionary standards.

"We've been collecting all this data on the mutation rate of the Y chromosome to be able to model its future fate," says Penn State biologist Kateryna Makova, the lead author of a new study.

"And we're not there yet. We cannot really tell you this many million years to disappearance. But it's certainly on its way out."

The X and Y determine sex at conception. An XX pairing gives you a girl and an XY, a boy.

Like the other 22, paired sets of chromosomes in the human genome, one is received from each parent.

Unlike the others, however, the mother can only pass on an X variety, while the father, randomly determining the offspring's sex, can donate an X or a Y.

> "We cannot really tell you this many million years to disappearance. But it's certainly on its way out."
> Biologist Kateryna Makova

Also, unlike other chromosomes, the X and Y do not remotely mirror one another.

The Y is much smaller than its female counterpart, holding fewer that 200 genes along the twisting strands of DNA from which it is built. This compares to more than 1,100 genes on the X.

And the number of genes the Y carries is growing smaller and smaller — so small that evolution, at some point, will likely think it too insignificant to maintain, Makova says.

That does not mean the Y's sex-determining capacity will blip out of existence as well, handing the world over to women, the authors say.

That function, along with other critical genetic roles that still reside on the Y — like sperm production — will likely be relocated on a new, more substantial sex chromosome.

The reason the Y has been losing genes lies largely in its uniqueness, says Melissa Wilson, the study's co-author.

When genetic mutations randomly occur along one chromosome, there is always a matching partner that can fix its garbled sequencing, swapping in bits of reparative DNA.

But the lonesome Y never has a partner.

The study looked at the Y's rate of evolutionary demise by comparing eutherian mammals — those that gestate in wombs like humans — to marsupial (kangaroo, or opossums) and egg-laying, monotreme (platypus, echidna) cousins. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Families of 9/11 victims ask Obama to keep Gitmo open

Families of people killed in the Sept. 11 terror attack on the U.S. urged President Barack Obama on Thursday to reverse his order to close the Guantanamo Bay prison.

They expressed fear the closure would further delay the long-stalled effort to prosecute the men who have claimed responsibility for the plot.

A contingent of nine relatives of Sept. 11 victims travelled to the U.S. Navy base in Cuba to observe pretrial hearings for several detainees, including five charged in the attack.

This is the third time that families of Sept. 11 victims have been brought to Guantanamo to observe the Military Commissions. The relatives, who are chosen at random by the government, met with detention centre officials and guards but did not see the inside of the prison camps. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Big opportunity for Aboriginal business

Wendy Cukier

Next week, Phil Fontaine, National Chief of the Assembly of First Nations (AFN), will step down and his successor will be elected. The well-respected and charismatic leader has had many moral and material victories, including the settlement of claims arising out of the 150-year residential school tragedy.

Less well-known, perhaps, is his success in advancing an integrated approach to economic and social development with a clear message: "First Nations want to be active participants in Canada's economy."

His message is gaining traction with the private sector and government. About four per cent of the Canadian population is Aboriginal, but it is the youngest and fastest growing segment and expected to account for 25 per cent of new workers by 2020. Currently, levels of literacy and educational attainment among Aboriginal people are lower than for average Canadians, a gap costing billions of dollars annually. Investments that close this gap will save money and ensure Canada has a globally competitive workforce.

But there is good news as well — self-employment among Aboriginal people has more than doubled in the last two decades and Aboriginal businesses created with support from Aboriginal financial institutions have doubled the average success rate (58 per cent versus 33 percent). While many are small scale, there are little known, multimillion-dollar companies and success stories in virtually every sector.

FocusOn FirstNations

Fontaine has persistently pushed for an integrated approach to economic development, attracting an impressive range of industry partners. The AFN Corporate Challenge connects First Nation and corporate communities around partnerships, investments, procurement, and employment. Recently, a $50-million fund to promote Aboriginal business and entrepreneurship — Capital for Aboriginal Prosperity and Entrepreneurship (CAPE) Fund Management Inc. — has attracted top corporate executives because it provides social as well as financial returns.

Last month, Indian and Northern Affairs Canada announced a new federal framework on Aboriginal Economic Development highlighting success stories and proposing an integrated approach. However, the language that targets those who are "already well positioned" and "already investment ready" suggests it could help the "rich get richer" and leave the rest behind.

Given the immense disparities remaining in Aboriginal communities, and needs for investments in education, basic and advanced infrastructure, no one size fits all. Building local capacity to design local programs to respond to economic priorities is fundamental.

While there is no shortage of politics or competing interests, the opportunity is immense, as is the cost of failure.

Doing the right thing, however, is seldom the easy thing to do.

Wendy Cukier is the associate dean of the Ted Rogers School of Management at Ryerson University, and the founder of Ryerson's Diversity Institute.

Understanding social network needed

UrbanCompass

John Sewell

metronews.ca/sewell

Thinking about Aboriginals as living mostly on reservations gets it wrong — three-quarters of all Aboriginals in Canada live off the reserve, and most of them live in cities.

We hardly ever think of Aboriginals as city people unless we see one on skid row. But that's an occasional thing, since most Aboriginals are fairly well integrated into the rhythms of city life. Some say they might be too well integrated and are losing touch with their roots and traditional culture.

The links between the reservations that youth leave and the big cities are not nearly as strong as they should be. Choosing to leave is often seen as the abandonment or rejection of tradition, and that feeds into the culture shock that puts some Aboriginals in trouble in the city.

What's needed to ease the transition is the same kind of support that newcomers from other countries need to survive as they adjust to a new culture: An understanding social network to fit into, and a good place to learn skills that will translate into paying work in the early days.

FocusOn FirstNations

Seventy-five years ago, Mohawks found a social network in the city that involved them in high steel construction work on Toronto's skyscrapers. They were so well-defined in this niche that it was assumed they had an innate ability to work with steel high in the sky without fear. But they were simply acting in the ways immigrants have always acted, by fitting in the city mould their social networks had already defined for them.

The high steel niche is no longer available for Aboriginals, just like being a police officer is no longer the preserve of the Irish. The challenge now for Aboriginal youth is finding a good place to fit in. They need that in order to get their feet on the ground and find their own way in the big city. That's where more thought and energy is needed now.

WestJet, Air Canada scramble to fill seats

SEASON It's only mid-July, but Canada's major airlines are already wringing their hands over what's expected to be a brutal fall and winter travel season.

WestJet Airlines said Thursday it is launching a 50 per cent off seat sale for travel between Sept. 8 and Dec. 16. It is also offering a price guarantee for those who book before July 23, but later find a cheaper fare for the same flight.

Air Canada, which had introduced its own 40 per cent off sale a day earlier, moved quickly to match WestJet's fall sale fares.

Observers noted that this year's sales are on top of fares that have already been discounted.

Both Air Canada and WestJet recently reported a slump in June load factors — the percentage of available seats filled — as consumers cut back on their travel spending during what is supposed to be one of the busiest travel periods. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Overseas travel

- Travel from overseas countries declined 7.8 per cent from April to 342,000 trips, Statistics Canada says.
- The agency says 11 of the top 12 overseas markets dropped, with Japan recording the largest decline at 34.6 per cent.

Business in brief

WIND FARM Boralex Inc. said Thursday that its French subsidiary has agreed to purchase an eight-megawatt wind farm for $24 million. The purchase will allow the Montreal-based power company to build and operate four wind turbines. All power will be sold to France's electric grid under contract for 15 years, Boralex said in a release. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hotelier expanding in midst of recession

People will start travelling again, says Gupta

Developer Steve Gupta is opening hotels across the Greater Toronto Area at a furious rate. That makes him either the most foolhardy hotelier in the city, or possibly the smartest.

Gupta is charging ahead despite a recession that has hurt business travel. Then there's the strong Canadian dollar and new passport regulations that have torpedoed American tourist traffic.

"I'm an optimist," says Gupta. "I really feel that the economy will turn around, that people will start travelling again."

Gupta has bet big in the past, but not like this. At the end of July he is relaunching his Comfort Inn on Jarvis Street into a Hilton property after a $4-million renovation. In April he unveiled his $60-million Hilton Garden Inn in the downtown core. By the end of this year he will have built two more hotels, with others slated for completion next year.

Gupta is building so many properties that the former math major is momentarily stumped when asked how many rooms he owns. "It's probably 1,600. Or wait, it's closer to 1,700," he says.

In all, Gupta has nine properties, with five under development.

TONY WONG/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Hotelier Steve Gupta and daughter Reetu stand in front of their newest hotel, the $60-million Hilton Garden Inn in downtown Toronto.

According to a survey by Colliers International Hotels and HLT Advisory, hoteliers think 2009 is pretty much a write-off.

Room prices and occupancy rates are down significantly. At the end of May, occupancy levels were down to 57 per cent in the GTA, a drop of seven percentage points from a year earlier. The average daily room rate was $125.83, down eight per cent from last year.

Gupta has heard it all before. But he doesn't intend his privately held, Markham-based Easton's Group of Companies to become another statistic.

He has forced the naysayers to eat humble pie before. When he opened his Comfort Inn on Jarvis in 2000, right beside a strip joint in one of the city's seedier areas, they said he would fail spectacularly.

That property went on to have some of the highest occupancies in the city. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

RIM pays $267M to settle dispute

PATENT Research In Motion has agreed to settle a patent dispute, going back to 2006, with Visto Corp. and pay $267.5 million US to the company, which has since renamed itself to Good Technology.

In return, the Waterloo-based maker of the BlackBerry said Thursday it will get a perpetual licence on all Visto patents.

RIM had responded to the patent suit with its own litigation in Canadian courts accusing Visto of violating three of its own email patents. Visto dropped its defence last year. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nexen says cash flow cut by half

ENERGY Nexen Inc. says a steep drop in oil prices dragged its profits down 95 per cent and cut its operating cash flow by half during the second quarter.

The Calgary-based energy firm also warned production will be squeezed over the next few months due to maintenance work at a number of its operations. The company said net income for the three months was $20 million. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Engineer convicted of stealing U.S. space secrets

A Chinese-born engineer has been convicted of stealing trade secrets critical to the U.S. space program. A federal judge ruled Thursday that former Boeing engineer Dongfan "Greg" Chung stole 300,000 pages of documents, including information about the U.S. space shuttle. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canucks confident, U.S. uncertain

It is a tale of two countries. Two surveys, released Thursday, offer strikingly different assessments of the consumer psyche in Canada and the United States.

Amid suggestions the economic crisis has reached an inflection point, Canadian consumer confidence is "resilient." That stands in sharp contrast to U.S. consumer sentiment, which continues to sour as Americans cast doubt on the prospects of a speedy recovery.

The TNS Canadian Facts' Consumer Confidence Index suggests economic confidence in this country is showing signs of stability after "holding steady" for the third month in a row.

Its July reading was 93.4, slightly better than the 92 scored in June. In fact, July's result suggests that Canadian consumer confidence could be edging back up to the 94.1 level achieved in May.

Michael Antecol, vice-president of TNS Canadian Facts, said Canadians appear to be shrugging off recent media reports suggesting the recovery could be slow — particularly for the job market.

Years to recovery

- About 7,400 jobs were lost last month versus 42,000 in May. Economists, however, suggest it could take two years for the labour market to recover, particularly in Ontario.

U.S. consumer sentiment, meanwhile, is heading south, according to a separate report. The RBC CASH Index points to a "marked downward shift" for July. The index reflects consumer attitudes and spending by households. It stood at 22.4 for July, an 11.9-point decline from June's 34.3 reading.

In brief

WIRELESS Nokia Corp. said Thursday second-quarter earnings fell 66 per cent amid low demand, and its stock sagged after it scrapped its target to gain market share this year. Net profit was 380 million euros, or $600 million, down from 1.1 billion euros in the same period a year earlier. Sales tumbled 25 per cent. Meanwhile, the average selling price of a Nokia handset fell to 62 euros from 74 a year earlier.

China on track to reach its 8% target growth rate

ECONOMY China's second-quarter growth accelerated on a stimulus-fed investment boom, the government reported Thursday, sparking a rise in Asian stocks on hopes the world's third-largest economy could help to lead a global recovery.

The economy grew by 7.9 per cent from a year earlier, up from the first quarter's 6.1 per cent growth rate, the National Bureau of Statistics said. Analysts said full-year growth should easily reach the government's eight per cent target. The pickup reflected the impact of Beijing's four trillion yuan ($654 billion) stimulus, an effort to offset a collapse in exports by pumping money into spending on public works construction.

First to emerge

- Many analysts expect China to be the first major country to emerge from the global slump.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wal-Mart creating eco-index

SUSTAINABILITY Wal-Mart's top executive said Thursday that the world's largest retailer hopes a new effort to develop eco-ratings for products the company sells can result in international sustainability standards that all retailers can apply to all suppliers.

The company plans to use surveys from its product suppliers and input from a consortium of universities, governments, suppliers and retailers to develop the index, which one of the developers added will not be ready to hit product packages for several years.

Turning back the clock

Tom Watson one stroke back of leader Jimenez at Open

On the eve of the British Open, Tom Watson got a modern-day text message from Jack Nicklaus' wife. Then it was time to turn back the clock at Turnberry.

Thirty-two years after his epic "Duel in the Sun" with the Golden Bear, Watson took advantage of pristine conditions on the very same course to shoot a stunning 5-under 65 Thursday. He held the lead until Spain's Miguel Angel Jimenez stole it away late in the day with a 64, only one shot off the record for lowest score in any major championship.

Still, it was Watson, the 59-year-old, five-time Open champion, who maintained the lead role — if only for a day.

"What a legend," Jimenez said.

Watson had been practising well all week, and got an extra boost a day earlier when Barbara Nicklaus sent a text wishing him good luck.

"I texted her back and said, "You know, we really miss you over here,"' Watson said. "And I really meant it. It's not the same without Jack playing in the tournament."

Nicklaus played his final British Open at St. Andrews in 2005 and faded into retirement. But the guy who beat him at Turnberry in '77 — with a 65 on the final day, no less — still has a few shots left.

Watson kept the ball in the fairway, rolled in five birdies and bailed himself out the few times he got into trouble, including a testy six-footer at the final hole to preserve a bogey-free round. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadian scores

- Mike Weir of Bright's Grove, Ont., had a strong day, eagling the seventh hole on the way to a 3-under 67.
- Stephen Ames of Calgary struggled throughout his round, posting three bogeys and a double-bogey en route to a 2-over 72.

JON SUPER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Miguel Angel Jimenez, right, looks down the fairway Thursday after a drive on the sixth tee as Ian Poulter looks on during the opening round of the British Open at the Turnberry golf course in Scotland. Jimenez shot a 5-under 65 to take the first-round lead.

A fish called Canada

All roads, they say, lead to Rome. But for Canadian athletes embarking on the World Aquatics Championships this is one thoroughfare where, as a winter country, success has meant swimming upstream.

"The chemical mix is the same," says Pierre LaFontaine, Canada's head swim coach. "Ice and water … hockey and swimming. They are both things that we as Canadians naturally do — only in opposite seasons."

Indeed, Canada is a player in the life aquatic.

An inordinate number of divers have worn the Maple Leaf with distinction including Olympic medallists Irene MacDonald, Sylvie Bernier, Annie Pelletier, Anne Montminy and Blythe Hartley. At the worlds, both Alex Despatie and Emilie Heymans bring multiple Olympic medals to the mix. Both are former world champions who can still make an impact. They are backed up by the next generation of Canadian talent ready to take the plunge in Italy.

Both of the water polo teams are underdogs. However, the women won a bronze medal at Montreal in 2005 and recently claimed silver in the World League Super Final. The men have beaten some of the world's best recently and were competitive at last summer's Olympics in Beijing.

In synchronized swimming, the legacy of Carolyn Waldo and Sylvie Frechette is strong. No Canadian entry should be counted out in this discipline.

In swimming, Canada is once again surfacing. While the glory days of Victor Davis and Alex Baumann are but a fond memory, the exploits of world champion Brent Hayden and Beijing Olympic medallist Ryan Cochrane speak volumes. Hayden has beaten Michael Phelps this season and Cochrane seems poised to replace the retired Grant Hackett of Australia as the No. 1 threat in the watery version of the metric mile.

Don't forget the women.

Annamay Pierse was just off the 200-metre breaststroke world record at the recent trials in Montreal. In the meantime, 15-year-old Amanda Reason smashed the world mark in the 50m breaststroke, a distance known as the "splash and dash."

All of this is reason to believe that Canadian fish will do more than tread water in the Tiber River, which runs through the eternal city of Rome.

Indeed, they may dive deep to claim golden treasure and swim with the sharks en route to more medals than the five they won in Melbourne, Australia, two years ago.

Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons. He has covered professional and amateur sports including nine Olympic games and numerous world championships.

Sports in brief

RUSSIA Team doctors are not to blame for the death of rising star Alexei Cherepanov, who collapsed during a Continental Hockey League game last year in Russia, investigators said Thursday.

Argos visit defending Grey Cup champs for Retro Week

FOOTBALL The Calgary Stampeders hope to celebrate CFL Retro Week with a performance reminiscent of last season.

The Grey Cup-champion Stampeders (0-2) will host the Toronto Argonauts (1-1) Friday at McMahon Stadium, when both teams will be wearing 1960s retro uniforms. Calgary knows it can't afford to fall to 0-3 in the difficult West Division, and won't be taking the Argos lightly.

CFL PREVIEW

Toronto at Calgary

"Toronto's coming in and I know their coach has them ready," said Stamps receiver Ken-Yon Rambo, who had a touchdown catch during last week's 42-30 road loss to the Winnipeg Blue Bombers after missing Calgary's home opener with a hamstring injury.

"All our fans are going to be here and we've got the retro game with the old-school look. All the players love that and were just ready to go out here and play."

Nocentini holds Tour lead

Sorensen takes 12th stage, Armstrong still in third place

Nicki Sorensen won the 12th stage of the Tour de France Thursday by breaking away and finishing well ahead of Laurent Lefevre, and Rinaldo Nocentini of Italy kept the yellow jersey.

Sorensen was part of a small group of seven riders that finished several minutes ahead of the main pack after foraging ahead unchallenged during the 211.5-kilometre trek from Tonnerre to Vittel, which featured six small hills.

The Danish veteran, after years as a support rider in Bjarne Riis' team, finally earned his first career stage win on the three-week race, and finished 48 seconds ahead of Lefevre.

"I'm 34 years old now and it's a big thing for me to perform at this level at this age," Sorensen said. "I started bike racing when I was 19 and I always hoped that I could maybe go on for many years and I think it shows today that it is possible."

The chasing pack, including Nocentini, seven-time champion Lance Armstrong and Alberto Contador, finished nearly six minutes behind. Contador remained in second place overall, with Armstrong in third.

"We let the breakaway go after four minutes," Nocentini said. "It's a tough stage tomorrow, but I'm already really happy and I will do my best to keep the yellow jersey tomorrow."

Astana rider Levi Leipheimer fell off his bike about three kilometres from the line in a crash involving two-time Tour runner-up Cadel Evans. Leipheimer had cuts and bruises on his right wrist, shoulder and back. He hopes to resume on Friday.

Gerba thriving with national team

SOCCER Ali Gerba has always been a soccer nomad, looking for a home. He seems to have found it with the Canadian national team and hopes Toronto FC will be an equally comfortable fit.

It's been a long road getting there for the 27-year-old from Montreal.

He is Canada's top gun at the Gold Cup with two goals in three games heading into Saturday's quarter-final with Honduras (Rogers Sportsnet, 5 p.m. ET).

"He's always been effective in the striking position," interim coach Stephen Hart said Thursday. "He's done it fairly consistently for Canada at the international level, and I think he's playing with players who understand his strengths. We try to play to everybody's strengths, and it's worked out for him so far."

Gerba appreciates that kind of insight and hopes his national team success can be recreated at the club level when he heads to Toronto after the CONCACAF championship.

Sports in brief

STEROIDS The New York Daily News is reporting that a former gym owner in the Houston area has been issued a subpoena by the Washington grand jury investigating whether Roger Clemens lied to Congress about using performance-enhancing drugs.

FORMULA ONE Former Ferrari team principal Jean Todt will join the race to succeed Max Mosley as president of Formula One's governing body. Todt made his candidacy official on Thursday, a day after Mosley had backed the 63-year-old.

B.J. RYAN The Chicago Cubs have signed former Toronto closer B.J. Ryan to a minor league deal. Released by the Blue Jays earlier this month, the 33-year-old Ryan will first report to the Cubs' spring training complex in Mesa, Ariz. If all goes well, he'll join triple-A Iowa.

SOCCER The Los Angeles Galaxy says its Sunday game against AC Milan is sold out for David Beckham's first home game of the season with the MLS team.

Heigl aims to solidify stardom with rom-com

If there's one proverb that actress Katherine Heigl may want to consider, it's that you should be careful what you wish for.

After all, the Emmy Award-winning star of Grey's Anatomy has openly tossed around the notion of leaving her successful television career to attempt stardom on the silver screen — as highlighted by her upcoming romantic comedy The Ugly Truth, in theatres next week.

It's easy to understand Heigl's grand ambition; movie stars have always commanded greater respect than that of the TV thespian. But the 30-year-old actress may be in for a fairly challenging climb. After all, the Hollywood history of actresses jumping from television to movies has been bleak. Just ask Morgan Fairchild.

These days the trend more likely favours the migration of movie actresses to television as admired cinematic mainstays like Holly Hunter, Kyra Sedgwick and Glenn Close now shoulder their own successes on the small-screen.

Knocked Up star Katherine Heigl and 300 hero Gerard Butler turn up the romance in The Ugly Truth, in theatres next week.

One reason for this movement may be the fact that there are simply more roles for women on TV. As a recent survey by the Center for the Study of Women in Television and Film at San Diego State University noted, "females accounted for 43 per cent of all characters in prime-time last season." Surely, that escalating figure does not translate to the big-screen.

In addition, only three of the top 25 highest-grossing film actresses working today even began their career in television. The pendulum has swung.

Still, maybe Heigl will beat the odds. She's certainly found success in such big-screen hits as Knocked Up.

If she does manage to bridge the acting gap and become a star of the silver screen, she'll certainly join an elite group that also features these talented TV actresses turned cinematic starlets:

MARISA TOMEI

After playing Lisa Bonet's wacky sidekick on The Cosby Show spin-off A Different World, Tomei got the last laugh with an Oscar win for My Cousin Vinny.

QUEEN LATIFAH

A rapper before starring on TV's Living Single, Latifah skyrocketed to cinematic superstardom with her Oscar-nominated role in Chicago.

SALLY FIELD

Although she began in 1960s television as Gidget, Field soon earned an Oscar in 1979's Norma Rae and has starred in everything from Steel Magnolias to Forrest Gump.

Duo brighten up Days of Summer

(500) Days of Summer

Director: Marc Webb
Stars: Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Zooey Deschanel
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

REVIEW It seems preposterous that the only thing a relationship movie has to do to seem original and inventive is tell the story from the guy's perspective, but that's Hollywood. The audience gets the guy's perspective and more in (500) Days of Summer, thanks to a non-linear storytelling structure that recounts a love affair far more effectively than a chronological retelling ever could.

The only real cringe factor is the pun of the title, but that's forgivable.

First-time director Marc Webb pulls out as many stops as he can think of, tossing in homages to classic films, a precocious youngster dispensing relationship advice, animation and one inspired musical sequence sure to make Hall and Oates popular with a whole new generation of fans. But what's most impressive is that with all vintage sneakers and ironic detachment set to a Smiths-heavy soundtrack, the movie doesn't fall off into a twee abyss.

Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Zooey Deschanel bring indie charm to (500) Days of Summer.

For that, primary credit goes to the lead actors. As the titular Summer, Zooey Deschanel does great work playing the idealized indie girlfriend — "quirky" seems too dismissive.

But the real star here is Joseph Gordon-Levitt, who has been quietly building an impressive dramatic resume in films like Brick and Mysterious Skin since leaving his teenage sitcom days behind.

Here, he comes into his own as a full-fledged leading man, making even self-indulgent moping seem compelling.

As Tom, a would-be architect working as a greeting card writer, he has the wry, everyman charm and sad eyes of a young John Cusack, but with a sense of urgency and determination that keeps things electrified.

We're with him every out-of-order step of the way.

Funny Force is strong with Zach

HEIDI PATALANO

Though Zach Galifianakis is sitting on a comfy couch at the Ritz Carlton, discussing his latest blockbuster film, he says his future plans involve, primarily ... Arby's.

As the first schlubby comedian to earn major box office points since Seth Rogen, Galifianakis is having quite a summer: First, with the success of bro-comedy The Hangover, and then with Disney's part live-action, part animation film, G-Force — which opens next week.

Galifianakis plays scientist Ben, who has trained four guinea pigs to become secret government agents.

As much as you'd think that premise is the stuff of one of his skits on funnyordie.com, this is a squeaky clean family film.

But that doesn't stop Galifianakis from adding his own irreverent edge to promoting the film.

Q How did you prepare to act with animated guinea pigs?

A I went to a lot of pet shops and tried to talk to guinea pigs and get them to talk back. That failed. Then, I went to New Guinea where that is a delicacy and I ate a lot of them. I got their souls in my body.

Q Has working on G-Force helped you with your own comedy?

A I'll probably just tour with huge guys in guinea pig outfits. It would be so funny if I turned crazy if I could never get off this guinea pig thing. They'll be like, 'Yeah he hangs out with guinea pigs and the California Raisins and McGruff the crime dog now.'

Q With this and The Hangover, you're having an excellent summer. What would complete it?

A I could use a foot massage.

Q What have you planned to do after this?

A I was going to go Arby's. Then, I have a TV show for HBO that's finished and then I'll hopefully work on a road trip film.

Q Wow, it sounds like you're on the way to owning a gold-gilded toilet seat.

A That's always been my dream, but the whole apparatus should be gold. And I want a fancy car with a chandelier in it. Actually, I don't spend money on anything so nothing will change. I'll throw it away somehow.

Stranger Cole, who opened Toronto's first Jamaican record store in Kensington market, is featured in the documentary Rocksteady.

Rocksteady turns to roots of reggae

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

FEATURE It sounds like an odd fit: A Swiss filmmaker making a movie about the evolution of Caribbean rhythms.

But Stascha Bader, whose documentary Rocksteady: The Roots of Reggae paints a vivid portrait of Jamaica's music scene in the mid-1960s, has an affinity for the music that transcends geography.

As a student in the 1970s, Bader was so taken by the "rocksteady" genre — a slower, more laid back version of ska featuring heavily politicized lyrics — that he made it the subject of his doctoral thesis at the University of Zurich.

"Everybody looks at rocksteady as reggae," explains Bader via email from Switzerland. "But rocksteady has a special and unique sound. It is influenced by soul and jazz, whereas reggae is heavily influenced by rock.

"The amps became much bigger, the bass and the drum started to dominate, and the studio producers began experimenting with a whole new range of electronic equipment. And yes, the hair grew longer, too."

Bader would seem to have an encyclopedic knowledge of the genre, but he defers the narration of his film to the musicians themselves. As Rocksteady opens, a number of seminal rocksteady performers have gathered in Kingston for a reunion concert, and the film is structured as a series of rehearsals and reminiscences.

The film would not have been possible without the participation of musical legends like Judy Mowatt and Hopeton Lewis and Stranger Cole, all of whom supplement their interviews with performances.

The 63-year old Cole actually has roots in Toronto, opening the city's first Jamaican record store in Kensington market; his rendition of the rocksteady staple Morning Train is one of the film's undeniable highlights.

"To be frank," says Bader, "Stranger Cole is not a great singer in a classical sense. He doesn't have the same gun of a voice as Ken Boothe or Hopeton Lewis, or even Judy Mowatt. And he is sometimes off key. But he is incredibly charming, and his voice is absolutely unique.

"All of this, together, with his stage presence, is hard to beat. I don't think that age has changed any of that. It maybe has added more charm to his personality."

• Rocksteady: The Roots of Reggae opens in Toronto next week.

His amazing, technicolour career

InFocus

Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

" As one writer noted, (Joseph) Gordon-Levitt has 'defied the clichéd fates that befall most underage actors when they grow up,' and audiences are all the richer for it."

Joseph Gordon-Levitt's name could easily have ended up on the same roll call as Mindy Cohn, Adam Rich and Jim J. Bullock.

After five years of pulling silly faces as Tommy on Third Rock from the Sun it seemed like he would to join the cast-off-second-bananas-from-popular sitcoms" club and next be seen on a rehab or reality show.

Then something interesting happened. He became one of the most remarkable actors of his generation.

Following the sitcom and a self-imposed two year retirement from acting (to attend Columbia) Gordon-Levitt came back with a vengeance, vowing only to do "stuff that I think is good."

His choices haven't exactly lit the box office ablaze — that may change with the release of his latest film, 500 Days of Summer — but turns in Mysterious Skin and Manic proved him to be a charismatic, fearless, big-screen presence.

In the modern-day film noir Brick, Gordon-Levitt uncovers an underground drug ring while investigating a murder. He's a high school loner with a knack for hard-boiled dialogue.

"I've got all five senses and I slept last night," he says to a school yard bully. "That puts me six up against the lot of you."

He gives an unhinged performance that seemingly channels both Raymond Chandler and The Breakfast Club — totally unique and totally entertaining.

In The Lookout, he went further, deepening his work, creating a person whose character has been shattered.

At the film's beginning he plays the guy you love to hate: He has a rich father, a beautiful girlfriend, good-looking friends and a fast car.

Life is perfect until a car accident leaves him with severe brain damage. When a charismatic former friend (Matthew Goode) manoeuvres him into taking part in robbing the bank where he works as a janitor, Chris thinks he is taking steps toward controlling his life. He doesn't realize he's being manipulated until it is too late. It's a subtle, well-crafted performance that is always interesting.

Less seen (unless you frequent film festivals) is Uncertainty, just one of the eight films he's shot in the last two years.

The movie, based on the different directions life can take at the flip of a coin, features improvised dialogue and stellar acting. Keep an eye open for it should it ever earn a theatrical or DVD release.

Somehow, as one writer noted, Gordon-Levitt has "defied the clichéd fates that befall most underage actors when they grow up," and audiences are all the richer for it.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

Third Rock from the Sun alumnus Joseph Gordon-Levitt has come a long way from his sitcom days with some choice film roles.

Doc better suited to TV

The End of the Line

Director: Rupert Murray
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●●

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

A scene from the documentary The End of the Line.

REVIEW The End of the Line presents audiences with a sobering and rather upsetting truth: Our oceans are being over-fished to the point that the world's supply of aquatic food could be exhausted within our lifetimes.

It's not exactly an issue that will draw as much press as the death of Michael Jackson, but it is something infinitely more important than much of the fluff that dominates the mainstream media.

Director Rupert Murray discovered the depth and scope of the over-fishing issue in Charles Clover's book The End of the Line and set about making it into a film to expose the issue to a wider audience.

Murray travelled all over the world making the movie, interviewing experts and showing some of the devastation caused by over-fishing. We see the depressingly depleted cod populations of Newfoundland, areas in Japan where endangered fish are targeted because of high demand from sushi restaurants, and many other areas affected by the problem.

This raw footage is surprising and often shocking, but perhaps the most fascinating aspect of the film are the interviews with scientists who were just as surprised and appalled when they recently discovered the extent of this problem themselves.

Fortunately, the movie isn't all bad news. The experts make it clear that the extinction of ocean edibles can be avoided and actions are already being taken to address the problem. While Rupert Murray's clear enthusiasm for the subject matter and talented eye as a filmmaker keep the movie afloat, there's no denying the material is a little dry for a feature film.

Though an important work, The End of the Line probably would have worked better as a television miniseries. That way, it could have gone into more depth while cutting down the running time of each episode to a more manageable chunk.

But I suppose we should be grateful that Murray was able to find the money to make a project about this subject matter at all.

Ferrell's King Dork closer to reality

Soraya M. buckles under moral tone

The Stoning of Soraya M.

Director: Cyrus Nowrasteh
Stars: Shohreh Anghdashloo, Navid Negabhan
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW The Stoning Of Soraya M. is a frustrating movie. The filmmakers had an incredible story to tell, but couldn't quite pull it off.

Based on the bestselling book by French journalist Freidoune Sahebjam, the movie is the true tale of a woman who was unjustly stoned to death in Iran so that her husband could remarry.

It's upsetting, shocking, and vital subject matter, but the filmmakers are unwilling to let the incendiary material speak for itself.

The movie is filled with unnecessary scenes that spell out the issues too clearly and sentimentalize the characters in a way that feels false. There are unforgettably powerful sequences throughout the film, but their effect is dulled by over-dramatization.

Shohreh Anghdashloo (Oscar nominated for House Of Sand And Fog) stars as Zahra, aunt of the departed Soraya. Early in the film she finds Freidoune Sahebjam (Mel Gibson's Jesus, Jim Caviezel) and tells him the tale of the stoning.

From there the story is told in flashback. The injustice is believable and disgusting, but the murderous husband Ali (Navid Neganhban) is played with the moral ambiguity of a cartoon supervillain.

Anghdashloo gives a remarkably honest performance, but has the thankless task of uttering impossible lines that plainly state the moral message of the movie.

Seraphine's art and soul

Seraphine
Director: Martin Provost
Stars: Yolande Moreau
Classification: G
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Art history has proved that madness and genius are inexorably linked, that the more tortured the creator, the more emotionally resonant — and by default, lucrative — their work becomes.

Certainly, Martin Provost's haunting film Seraphine, which chronicles the troubled life of spinster painter Seraphine Louis in post-First World War France, exemplifies this theory. The picture, which swept the Cesar's (France's equivalent to Oscar) earlier this year, is slow, meditative and spare in its time spanning storytelling. It's also an utterly spellbinding work of serious cinema, elegant, unpretentious, poetic and unforgettable.

Seraphine is a spellbinding work of serious cinema, elegant, unpretentious, poetic and unforgettable.

Yolande Moreau stars as the titular working class artist, who spends the first half of her life humbly cleaning the dirty sticky floors of moneyed snobs who look down upon both her station and her eccentric ways.

When famous German art dealer Wilhelm Uhde (Ulrich Tukur) arrives at the country hotel where Seraphine works is on display, it's only a matter of time before he takes notice of this strange, naive woman's stunning yet somewhat frightening paintings. But as interest in Seraphine's work increases, and her financial situation changes for the better, her quirks slowly evolve into full-blown psychosis.

Sequences of the frumpy, slouchy Seraphine weaving her way through a landscape of wind whipped trees, flowing rivers and natural beauty juxtaposed with the dimly lit misery of her working life are lyrical and hypnotic, as impressionistic as the demented floral explosions she captures on canvas.

And that seems to be Provost's esthetic — to create a film that captures in tone and mood the soul of Seraphine's imagery. In other words, this ain't Transformers 2 — and thank God for that.

Humpday: Male ego revisited

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Sundance Film Festival favourite Humpday, in theatres next Friday, touches upon the frailties of the male ego.

FEATURE Humpday is one of those movies that's admittedly high-concept but could've easily just been plain stupid.

In fact, a tale about two heterosexual pals who make a drunken pact to shoot an "artistic" porn film starring themselves having sex, you could be forgiven for thinking the quirky premise might be a rejected Adam Sandler treatment. Luckily, it's definitely not that.

"It was important not to make it a farce," insisted Josh Leonard who stars as a bohemian who stumbles back into his married buddy's life with the provocative art project.

"There's certainly an audience for (farce comedies) but then there's another kind of humour that comes out of putting a pretty close microscope on the moronic ways in which we, as fumbling humans walking around the planet, try to circumvent our own fallibility and that's what we wanted to do with this movie."

"We joked a lot about how if girls were going to do something like this, they'd just talk it out and be done with it," added co-star Alycia Delmore.

Actress Alycia Delmore

"(Some men) just paint themselves into corners and refuse to get out."

Directed by Lynn Shelton, Humpday (in theatres next Friday) picked up the Special Jury Prize at this year's Sundance Film Festival and quickly gained a devoted following. It's not surprising; driven by the character's own stubborn one-upmanship, the film cleverly pushes the envelope by exploring the frailties of the male ego only touched on in the recent rise of such hit "guy-comedy" hits as Role Models and The Hangover.

"Guys in 2009 are trying to get over all of the bad information that we've grown up with over generations about what a man's supposed to be, what a man's supposed to do and how much you're allowed to express your feelings," said Leonard explaining why guy-comedies are becoming so popular in Hollywood. "It's got us all a little bit confused."

Billy Talent powers up for act III

Toronto rock outfit shakes pop punk label, recruits Pearl Jam producer for new album

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

If you're not one of the thousands intimately familiar with Billy Talent's music, there's a good chance you've dismissed the foursome for being too pop punk. It's a tag that band has been saddled with for years, and one they've always felt was unjustified.

"People always lumped us in with the next pop punk band that was just around the corner that no one cared about," says bassist Jonathan Gallant at the Four Seasons in Toronto. "We never felt those comparisons were fair."

"It was absolutely frustrating to get pigeon-holed like that," adds singer Ben Kowalewicz. "It was very hard at the beginning, but now we don't care."

While the band has gotten over the name calling, many fans still avoid Billy Talent because they don't see a difference between the Toronto-based group and acts like Sum 41 and Simple Plan. But, they've never really sounded like these bands. Their music was always more brash and more rock than most pop punkers, and their third disc should prove it.

Billy Talent III is a major step up from the group's previous albums. With Sabbath-like riffs and a more metal-meets-hard rock sound, this record has the power and guts that's mostly eluded the band. Their tunes are still as catchy as ever, and the Kowalewicz/Ian D'sa vocal attack remains intact, but the band is definitely treading new ground.

> "People always lumped us in with the next pop punk band that was just around the corner that no one cared about. We never felt those comparisons were fair."
> Jonathan Gallant

"We took a step back (after hearing Ian play the songs) and thought, 'This is pretty riffalicious,'" says Kowalewicz. "This is definitely a throw back record to a lot of mid-'90s bands we were listening to. It's very Soundgarden-esque in a lot ways."

Part of the reason for that '90s sound has to do with their producer, Brendan O'Brien. He's worked with everyone the Stone Temple Pilots to Bruce Springsteen, but it's his long stint as Pearl Jam's producer that's made him famous.

Needless to say, Billy Talent was excited about working with the grunge legend, and he regaled them with plenty of stories about some of alt-rock's greatest acts. ("We're not privileged to share any of them," says Kowalewicz.)

But Kowalewicz still gets excited about one particular moment with O'Brien. "At one point he said, 'Sorry guys I have to fly to Seattle and go see Pearl Jam,' and me being the biggest Eddie Vedder fan, I was like, 'What?' Eddie ended up giving him a lighter and then Brendan gave me the lighter. It's on my mantle."

This record likely won't turn Kowalewicz into the new Eddie Vedder, but it's a sure bet that the disc will bring in new fans, even the ones who disliked the band in the first place. And if you still can't stand Billy Talent after this? Be prepared to hate them for a long time.

"For people that do like us, we hope they can cut through the BS detectors and appreciate a good song for a good song," says Kowalewicz. "Because we're going to keep writing records until we're 70."

MP3 technology starting to show its age

SoundCheck

We tend to think of the MP3 files that zing around the Internet and into our computers and portable music devices as uber-modern technology. And why not? The fact that we can cram thousands of songs into a thing the size of a deck of cards approaches the realm of magic.

MP3s have managed to outlast all competitors, chiefly because it could not support any digital locks. The MP3 codec was born before Digital Rights Management (DRM) and could not be locked down, much to the consternation of the music industry. MP3s worked on virtually any device (including the iPod, a big part of why it became so entrenched with consumers) and when the record labels started swinging their big DRM stick around, consumers eschewed any file format that might have interfered with their ability to move their music around. Only Apple's AAC format — the default format used by iTunes — could say it had any traction and trust. The same can't be said for WMA, ATRAC3, Real G2 or Liquid Audio.

But MP3 technology is has already passed its 20th birthday. It's a product of the 1980s and is starting to show its age. It's only about audio; it's can't store extra information other than what is "tagged" to the file (like artwork); and it's certainly not very interactive. This is where a French company comes in with a format they call MXP4. Simply put, this new technology extends the capabilities of a basic music file into areas like video and the ability to contain multiple tracks.

Several artists like Lily Allen, Dave Stewart (Eurythmics) and Basement Jaxx have begun experimenting with MXP4s. Because the format allows for different tracks to be pulled from a single file, you can do things like take a guitar track out or add in a new beat. In other words, fans could remix their favourite songs. DJs would have an easier time of creating mash-ups, too. And MXP4 files can contain video, too.

Sounds cool, huh? But consumers have been burned before (Sony rootkit, anyone?) so the first and biggest hurdle will be to gain consumer trust. If people believe that someone is trying to screw them with technology again, then yet another promising advance might die before it gets a chance to prove itself.

Eagles of Death Metal soar across Canada

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

For Eagles of Death Metal's guitarist-vocalist Jesse Hughes, it's all about the funk.

Sure, the giant, mustached singer works hard to channel the raw side of rock, howling, grinning and jump kicking across the stage.

But despite his music's grounding in trashy, disco-flavoured Some Girls-era Rolling Stones garage rock, Hughes says his swagger leans just as heavy on the funk. While he often covers Stones tracks at shows, he equally loves James Brown and George Clinton.

"I can relate to Keith Richards, since he's the laziest guitar player in the world. I'm from the South (so I'm laid back), and I like open tuning," Hughes told Metro ahead of the Canadian leg of the groups current tour. "But my biggest source of inspiration is George Clinton ... Keeping a groove that tight for eight minutes takes serious focus."

Hughes definitely shares Dr. Funkenstein's romantic streak. EODM's three albums are peppered with odes to the ladies like Heart On, English Girl and Cherry Cola, which join love-hate reflections on the L.A. lifestyle's glitz and glamour. In interviews, Hughes regularly hits on female journalists. On stage, he sweats and struts to get the girls dancing. Barks, howls and grunts punctuate his songs, echoing James Brown's enthusiasm — another influence that he said guides his songwriting.

"The Rolling Stones wanted to sound like Chuck Berry and they sucked at it, so they ended up sounding like the Rolling Stones," he said. "I wanted to sound like Prince, but ended up sounding like Eagles of Death Metal."

With three albums released and another three "in the can," Hughes said he and writing-recording partner Josh Homme are focusing more on studio work. While the self-taught guitarist hangs out with A-list musicians (Homme's Queens of the Stone Age and Desert Sessions projects involve a 'who's who' of some of rock's finest players) Hughes said he prefers hammering out tracks in the studio than working towards virtuoso playing — perhaps another nod to Richards, who's said he prefers rhythm to overly showy lead guitar.

"I'd only been playing guitar for six months when I recorded the first album," said Hughes. "I wasn't doing it to learn scales or impress people — I just wanted to sound like Little Richard and Chuck Berry. With the girls, but without any jail time."

Former Hole bassist Melissa Auf der Maur gets swine flu

HEALTH It seems celebrity skin is just as susceptible to swine flu as everyone else's.

Former Hole and Smashing Pumpkins bassist Melissa Auf der Maur says she's recovering from a bout with the H1N1 influenza strain.

"It turns out that, somewhere between a video shoot in Vermont, a heavy metal concert in London, and my own musical showcase in Toronto, I had indeed fallen victim to a world pandemic," Auf der Maur wrote in a first-person account at online magazine, the Mark.

"I am now officially on the mend — thanks to a combination of naturopathic treatments and heavy-duty antibiotics, among other survival tools."

Auf der Maur started feeling symptoms in May, suffering from a stuffy nose, a sore throat and body aches.

Timber Timbre plays Church Of The Redeemer Friday night.

When it comes to independent Canadian labels, most bands would do just about anything to get on Arts & Crafts. So naturally, when Broken Social Scene's record company told Taylor Kirk, who plays under the name Timber Timbre, that they wanted to release his record, he was thrilled.

"At one point they said they were interested in working with me in some capacity, but I had no idea what they were going for," says Kirk, on the phone form his Toronto home. "I was pretty shocked when they expressed an interest in putting it out."

For most people, this will be the first time they'll have heard Kirk's self-titled sophomore record, but it was actually released six months ago on the small Toronto label Out of This Spark. A friend of the singer-songwriter gave the record to the Constantines' Bry Webb, who passed it onto A&C's co-founder Jeffrey Remedios.

Kirk says the Arts & Crafts version, which came out last month, is exactly the same as the original. What is different though is the attention being heaped upon this still-green musician, and the fact that he's now expected to make music his full-time career.

"It still makes me nervous," says Kirk, about playing music full time. "Even though it's what I've been working towards for a long time, it's never been a goal. It seemed like such a remote possibility.

"The attention has been a bit jarring," he adds. "When the press release went out, I didn't expect it to be such big news."

It's likely Kirk will become an even bigger deal once people start listening to the record. The album is filled with dark, haunting Tom Waits-like sounds, and although the tracks lean on the quiet, minimalist side they're still infectious and polished.

It's a big improvement over Kirk's last record Medicinals, which was a solid effort in its own right. But with that record's rough edges, fuzzy production and more bluesy tones it wasn't as accessible as his current disc. "I had been making records in rough spaces and I thought they had been pretty crude ... I wanted to make a proper recording that wasn't going to alienate people by the merits of the production," explains Kirk.

30 Rock, Mad Men lead again

Tina Fey's satirical sitcom, 30 Rock, led the pack with 22 nominations as this year's Emmy contenders were announced Thursday, while Canadians were well represented on the list with nods for Michael J. Fox, Kiefer Sutherland, Sandra Oh and William Shatner.

Fox is up for best guest actor in a drama, for his appearance on Rescue Me; Sutherland is nominated for best lead actor in a miniseries or movie, for a special two-hour version of 24; Oh is up for best supporting actress in a drama, for playing Dr. Christina Yang on Grey's Anatomy; and Shatner is nominated for best supporting actor in a drama, for his role on Boston Legal.

Fox's five-episode stint on Rescue Me was his first acting role in several years, following guest appearances on Boston Legal in 2006 and Scrubs in 2004.

The '60s retro series, Mad Men, leads the drama pack with 16 nominations and, with 30 Rock as best comedy, was honoured last year as best drama. They now have a shot at repeating their performance at September's awards.

The TV movies Grey Gardens, with 17 nominations, and Into the Storm, with 14 nominations, were among the front-runners. Chandra Wilson of Grey Anatomy's and Jim Parsons of The Big Bang Theory helped make the announcement at the TV academy's theatre — and both proved to be among the lucky.

"No! … This is some sort of trick fest," said Parsons, when his nomination for lead actor in a comedy series was announced.

"I feel a little dreamlike right now," Parsons said later about his first-time Emmy nomination.

"I'm going to the party," was Wilson's response to her bid for lead actress in a miniseries or movie for Accidental Friendship. She was also nominated for supporting actress in a drama series for Grey's Anatomy.

In a sad tribute, Farrah's Story, a documentary account of Farrah Fawcett's battle against cancer, was nominated in the nonfiction special category. Fawcett died June 25.

"It's very bittersweet. Farrah passed away three weeks ago today," said Alana Stewart, who helped film her longtime friend. "I know that she would be so, so happy. This was so important to her, this project. She's been nominated before, and I just know that this would be the most important one of all."

The number of contenders in series and acting categories were expanded this year, which may have allowed room for some unexpected bids, including a rare best-comedy series nomination for an animated series, Family Guy.

Even long-running The Simpsons had to settle once again for inclusion in the category designated for animated programs. Only one animated program besides Family Guy has gained a nomination among filmed comedies — The Flintstones in 1961.

The series fields are especially crowded, with seven contenders in both drama and comedy categories. Joining Mad Men are fellow cable dramas Big Love, Breaking Bad, Damages and Dexter. Two network dramas, House and Lost, also made the cut.

Among comedies, the nominees besides 30 Rock and Family Guy include other network series How I Met Your Mother and The Office. Cable contenders include Entourage, Flight of the Conchords and Weeds.

In announcing that the traditional five nominees would grow to six in top categories, the TV academy noted that a tie could expand the field even more.

McCartney back to Ed Sullivan, 45 years later

THE BEATLES Forty-five years after the Beatles' American TV debut at the Ed Sullivan Theater, Paul McCartney got back — with a concert on top of the marquee.

McCartney put on an outdoor show atop the theatre's marquee for thousands of fans Wednesday. The performance was shown during the former Beatle's first appearance on CBS' Late Show With David Letterman.

The Beatles made their American television debut on The Ed Sullivan Show on Feb. 9, 1964.

During his appearance with Letterman, McCartney recalled that it was "kind of scary" the first time the Beatles appeared on Sullivan's show.

However, he didn't acknowledge it during a later appearance when a floor manager asked "you nervous?" when the curtain was about to be raised for McCartney to perform "Yesterday" alone, without his bandmates.

"You should be," McCartney said the manager told him. "There's 73 million people watching."

Letterman said that his impression of the Beatles was that it was four guys on a long spring break, having a great time. The Beatles went briefly to Miami the first time they came to the United States.

"The British car firm loaned us an MG each and, you know, there was a beach and sand and girls and, come on!" McCartney said.

On the show, McCartney performed the Beatles hit Get Back and the song Sing the Changes from his most recent album.

Twilight role transforming Lefevre's life

ANNE BRODIE
for Metro Canada

Montreal's Rachelle Lefevre has let the bull out of the gate. Her life is about to change dramatically and unequivocally thanks to a vampire phenom known as The Twilight Saga.

She looms large as Victoria the vengeful vampire in New Moon and Eclipse. And although she only appeared in the first installment, Twilight, very briefly, she says it has impacted her life in ways she never imagined.

"I think things might get heavier now because my role is bigger in the second and third films," she says over the phone from Los Angeles. "Certain things are wonderful. I get to read for films I wouldn't have gotten to read more, I'm traveling more and doing more press and I get that.

"The difficult part is being photographed walking down the street. I was just in what I thought was a private moment with my boyfriend (Jamie Thomas King) at a restaurant and we thought we were alone in the world on patio. When we left, the paparazzi chased us down the street. We realized they had taken photos of us throughout our meal. It was creepy."

Lefevre understands she chose to work in a job that puts her out there, but adds the attention can be frightening.

"I feel like there are two sides to fame," she says. "It's like a seesaw. Sometimes I would absolutely not leave the house without hair and makeup and cute jeans. The other day with my boyfriend, I just couldn't be bothered to care. I was jetlagged, a mess, no makeup.

"I can't be a slave. I don't mean this to diminish terrorism, but it is a bit like it. They function like terrorists."

Part one of The Summit airs Sunday night on CBC. The mini-series concludes next Sunday night

Speaking of terror, Lefevre stars in the TV mini-series The Summit, a doomsday thriller airing this Sunday on CBC, set during a G8 meeting in Canada. She plays a documentary filmmaker exposing abuses in the Colombian rose trade, and who also happens to be the Prime Minster's daughter. Her character falls victim to a man-made plague being tested on rose workers.

Lefevre says she understands why audiences enjoy scary, apocalyptic scenarios.

"We're all naturally afraid of what we don't understand and there is so much we're afraid of. If you make something epic, it almost seems farfetched.

"These huge disaster movies about biological warfare that wipes out humanity in three days seem so far fetched. It's reassuringly epic. It calms our fears. We're so much better off. We can look around and go, 'All is normal.'"

Lefevre says The Summit inspired her to think globally.

"I love documentary films," she says. "We shot in Ecuador and I did a lot of research on the roses industry. The same human atrocities are also in the chocolate industry in Africa. I got passionate and met coffee workers and chocolate sellers.

"Chocolate, coffee and roses are so integrated into our everyday lives. Try to go a day without chocolate if you're a woman! Try not to go to Starbucks. We consume these things in mass quantities."

Going Out

Comics Saleh and Godfrey stand off

Comedians Godfrey, who achieved near-cult status playing himself in the film Zoolander, and Australian-raised Akmal Saleh are among the comics taking part in tonight's Just for Laugh's Ethnic Comedy Show at the Winter Garden Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

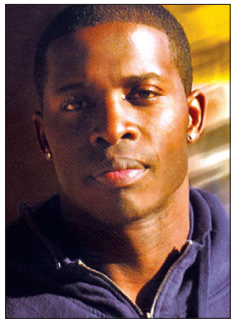
The two took to ask each other a few questions for Metro Canada.

Akmal Saleh



Godfrey

Godfrey interviews Akmal:

Godfrey: Do you steal other people's material?
Akmal: What has been implied here?

What do you think about prop comedy?
It depends if they are funny or not. I love The Amazing Johnathan.

Who was your comic inspiration?
Steven Wright.

How do you handle a heckler?
With great comeback lines like "Stop it! You're ruining it for everybody!"

How do you feel about Michael Richards' outburst (In 2006, Richards used a racial slur six times during a comedy show that was recorded on a cell phone camera and circulated on the internet)?
What a great career move.

Just for Laughs

The Toronto Just for Laughs Festival runs until Sunday at venues around the city. For full details visit hahaha.com. Here's a glance at what's on today:

Today
- Homegrown Comics, Absolute Comedy, 8 p.m.
- The Canadian Masters, Absolute Comedy, 10:45 p.m.
- Nikki Payne, Comedy Bar, 8 p.m.
- Sing Mit Heino!, Comedy Bar, 10 p.m.
- Sarah Silverman, Massey Hall, 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.
- Bo Burham, French Comedy Bastards and a sketch show, Second City, 7 p.m.

Akmal interviews Godfrey:

Akmal: Are you circumcised?
Godfrey: Yes.

I can see you have done well in your career, much better than me, can you please send me $1,000 to help my career?
Sorry — I'm Nigerian so I already know that trick.

What's your favorite old school joke?
Anything that starts with "a guy walks into a bar…" will make me laugh.

Have you seen my cell phone — I have lost it again.
Yeah I have it and I just called home to Nigeria during peak hours. Thanks!

How many light bulbs does it take to change a comedian?
(Godfrey failed to see the humour here and responded with an actual "booooooo!")

Metro's 7th Heaven: Metro taps what's hot right now

1 L.A. Candy

BOOK The Hills may not be alive with the sound of Lauren Conrad anymore, but the New York Times bestseller list surely is. The former star of the hit MTV show topped the newspaper's book charts this week with L.A. Candy, her debut novel about — guess what — a Los Angeles youngster who gets discovered for her own reality show.

2 The Conduit

GAME Common complaint: Wii games got the fun but where's the looks? Nintendo intends to shut up the naysayers once and for all with this gorgeous-looking, first-person shooter. Wii fans in search for their Halo should look no further.

3 Meaghan Waller

MODEL The 19-year-old Winnipeg native had her Cinderella moment when she was crowned Canada's Next Top Model in the CTV show's finale on Tuesday. The self-proclaimed "modelling greenhorn" edged out other Albertan girls — Linsay Willier of Edmonton and Calgary's Nikita Kiceluk.

4 Mad Men

DVD If you've been in the dark about this sexy but nuanced romp through the world of 1960s advertising, then it's about time you saw the light, with season 2!

Younger Simmons trying to leave his mark

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Fans of both rock gods KISS and reality TV are most likely aware of Gene Simmons.

The tongue wagging, fire belching, bassist/merchandiser is iconic for his dirty mind, rocking ways and, with his hit A&E show Family Jewels, his rather charming brood.

Along with mom (Canadian actress Shannon Tweed) and sister Sophie, said brood also includes son Nick, who by all appearances seems to be as obsessed with rock and roll (he fronts the L.A. band Hands of God) and pulp fiction as his famous papa.

This August, Nick Simmons proves the latter passion with Incarnate, a gruesome graphic novel series from Radical Comics that the talented prodigy created, wrote and penciled. Charting the adventures of an ageless, undead, flesh-eating teenager, the Japanese manga-styled book exemplifies many influences, something its creator believes is mandatory for every successful comic book.

"I always think a (comic) series has more or less failed unless there is more than one genre at work in it," Simmons says.

And although Incarnate bears the macabre mark that his father cemented with KISS's stage strutting, blood dripping Demon character, the younger Simmons is adamant that his muse remains exclusively personal.

"Dad's interests and mine are either coincidental or the result of genetics," he says. "My main interests are profoundly nerdy, I admit, and that has made me a bit of an outsider, especially here in L.A."

Incarnate is adult fare and gory with pages of fantasy-based violence. But it's something Simmons justifies, believing it to be normal and even somewhat socially responsible.

Exhibiting aboriginal art

FocusOn FirstNations

HANNAH ZITNER
for Metro Canada

Curators across the country are challenging traditions as they focus on exhibits displaying aboriginal work with an emphasis on fine art over ethnographic examination.

Until recently, aboriginal art had found its home in museums and galleries as documentation of a culture, a trend the National Gallery of Canada and art houses across the country are trying to buck.

"When we think of preserving, we think of the future and having really good documents for showing these times. But, it's important to view these works as art and not just ethnographic documentation," Greg Hill, Audain curator of Indigenous Art at the National Gallery of Canada said from Ottawa.

It wasn't until 1986 that the country's national gallery made its first "self-conscious purchase" of contemporary aboriginal art: Carl Beam's The North American Iceberg. Since then, their collection has grown to roughly 2000 First Nations, Inuit and Métis pieces.

Just outside of Toronto, the McMichael gallery — which has a 100 per cent made in Canada mandate — has just kicked off an 11-week show featuring 40 contemporary First Nations artists.

"We want to underline the fact that they are the finest artist working in Canada today. They take traditional art and use it as a starting point for self-expression," Tom Smart, executive director and CEO of the gallery said.

One purpose of the exhibit is to look at a revival of some traditional techniques nearly forgotten after the Canadian government repressed many aspects of Indigenous art, culture and ceremony.

Further east, the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia in Halifax is also making an effort to expand their Aboriginal collection.

Since acquiring their first Inuit print in 1991, the permanent collection has increased to include 160 works in the Inuit gallery and 120 in the First Nations room.

The Curator of Collections at the gallery said part of the reason collectors took so long to include this type of art, is that it was simply overlooked.

"When you look at European gallery models, they're collecting from elsewhere and often, you don't see what's in your own backyard," Shannon Porter said, adding that it's wonderful that galleries across the country are expanding their horizons and including more art focused on Aboriginal culture.

"I hope we keep collecting and pursuing the vision."

ARTIST ALAN SYLIBOY/ART GALLERY OF NOVA SCOTIA

Alan Syliboy's work, seen here, is one of the pieces in the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia's collection.

"It's important to view these works as art and not just ethnographic documentation."
Greg Hill, Audain curator of Indigenous Art at the National Gallery

Other exhibits with aborignal art

- Vancouver Art Gallery: Permanent collection contains work by First Nations artists, such as Haida artist, Robert Davidson that bridge traditional and contemporary.
- Currently exhibit: Two Visions: Emily Carr and Jack Shadbolt, shows how two Euro-Canadian artists address and examine First Nations art such as totems and masks.
- Art Gallery of Ontario: Current exhibition: The Thomson Collection of Canadian Paintings and First Nations Objects, includes historical pieces by Charles Edenshaw and several First Nations objects such as masks, amulets, combs.

share the love with Beth & Brian

Dear Beth & Brian,

My favourite Breyers Moment happened the other day when I was at home nursing a sore back and my brother, who's a doctor, decided to come over to help make me feel better. He prescribed two bowls of Breyers® Double Churn Banana Cream Pie then we spent the afternoon laughing and reminiscing about when we were kids. When I asked why he prescribed two bowls he said, "because Banana Cream Pie was very contagious."

Happily contended
Leslie

Brian:
That's sweet, say, what flavour would he prescribe for thinning hair?

Beth:
Treat yourself well and create your own Breyers Moments. Try the scrumptious, luscious Breyers® Double Churn Banana Cream Pie – it's the delightful and delicious way to share the love with those who matter most.

Hit the road for summer theatre

Resilient Red Barn is among Ontario's out-of-town play destinations

"The show must go on" was an apt motto for the Red Barn Theatre at Jackson's Point in the Town of Georgina this year.

The company, celebrating its 60th anniversary (making it older than Stratford's), suffered a major setback when its main theatre space burned to the ground on April 18.

But two months later, the Red Barn opened at Keswick's Stephen Leacock Theatre, its temporary home, with a production of Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie (which premiered 60 years ago in the company's first season), with acclaimed theatre/television actress Fiona Reid playing Amanda and Jonathan Crombie as Tom. Norm Foster's comedy The Melville Boys fills the space next week.

"It was pretty devastating because ... both shows were designed for the space," said artistic director Jordan Merkur.

"It's a testament to the resourcefulness of people in theatre and to the interest in the community because I have to say it wouldn't have happened without the Town of Georgina," Merkur said.

The vigour of theatre in Ontario's smaller communities, and its tenacious focus on Canadian dramas and musicals, may surprise stage buffs who rarely venture beyond Toronto.

PAWEL DWULIT/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

A firefighter stands by the remains of The Red Barn Theatre in Jackson's Point, Ont., on April 19, the day after the theatre burned to the ground. But the company is determined to carry on with its 60th anniversary season this summer, and will stage its productions at the Stephen Leacock Theatre in Keswick, Ont. For this summer's lineup, see redbarntheatre.ca.

But ASTRO (the Association of Summer Theatres 'Round Ontario), now celebrating its 25th season, has 22 companies from Cornwall to Windsor, Niagara Falls to Penetanguishene.

It includes venerable companies such as the Shaw and Stratford festivals, as well as smaller newcomers such as the Festival Players of Prince Edward County. Every year it lures a number of top performers and playwrights. The province's countryside charm is an added bonus.

ASTRO acts as a sort of a collective marketing tool for big and small companies, producing brochures and maintaining an updated website of coming shows.

Coordinator Tim Chapman said the association helps to carry on "an old Ontario tradition" of bringing theatre to the people.

A personal favourite of Chapman's is the Blyth Festival, in its 35th season, in the small eponymous town in southwestern Ontario.

"I've been in theatres around the world and ... to this day, (Blyth) is the only theatre I've been in where you see farmers sitting in the theatre with their tanned necks and arms and bulging biceps," Chapman said.

Sarah Phillips, artistic director of the Festival Players of Prince Edward County, said the three-year-old company has three Canadian plays this season, all in "unique settings," including an old converted church, a heritage park and a refurbished barn.

"Being out of the city, driving the country roads to get there, all adds to the experience. I like to think you get a little more for your money ... than 'Oh, that was a good show.' It's idyllic," Phillips said.

Working with local tourism people, packages include overnight stays at bed and breakfasts and picnic lunches combined with bicycle rentals and a matinee show, she added.

Attracting professional-quality actors, directors and stage crew from places like Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto has not been difficult. Since shows only run from Wednesday to Saturday, "they've got Sunday, Monday, Tuesday to go to the beach, visit farms, pick strawberries and have a country vacation for the other half of the time. It's a pretty sweet deal," Phillips said.

Fake hotel reviews spur TripAdvisor disclaimers and calls for overhaul

TRAVEL WEBSITE The influential travel website TripAdvisor has been quietly posting disclaimers to warn customers about hotels writing fake reviews to improve their online popularity rankings or hurt their competitors.

The red disclaimers flagging hotels' names demonstrate TripAdvisor's problem with fake reviews, travel bloggers and industry experts say. TripAdvisor said the disclaimers have been used since 2006 and involve a small fraction of the 400,000 hotels reviewed.

The company, based in Newton, Mass., said it has a successful system to root out inaccurate reviews. "The 23 million reviews and opinions are authentic and they're unbiased and they're from real users," spokesman Brooke Ferencsik said. Last month travel websites and blogs began to log and discuss the red warnings.

One blogger, Jeff Tucker, warned that without changes to restore credibility to the reviews, the site is "going to come crumbling down behind them."

The company has policies to weed out suspicious reviews, screens reviews before they are posted, and uses automated tools to identify attempts to corrupt the system, Ferencsik said. Users can also report reviews they find are not credible. Ferencsik declined to describe how they determine if a post isn't legitimate, saying that could help fake posters subvert the rules. Hiking in Algonquin Park.

Take a hike

Chances are most visitors to Algonquin Provincial Park will get more excited about seeing deer or catching fish than spotting — or swatting — bugs. But insects make up the majority of animal species in the park and deserve respect. "Many plants would disappear without insect pollinators, and entire ecosystems would collapse in the absence of insects in the food chain," say the Friends of Algonquin Park, a non-profit group. Algonquin supports at least 7,000 species of insects, according to a recent estimate, compared to fewer than 300 species of birds and mammals. Visitors can join a park naturalist for an insect walk or an evening program on bugs. Guided walks are held daily in Algonquin until Labour Day weekend on various themes — others include birds, wildflowers, mushrooms and logging history — as part of a summer interpretive program. In the evening, talks are presented at the park's outdoor theatre. Topics include black bears, canoeing and the celebrated landscape artist Tom Thomson, who died mysteriously in the park in 1917. As well, three-hour wolf howling expeditions are held on Thursdays in August and in September before Labour Day "when weather and accessible wolves permit," says the Friends group. Algonquin is about 300 kilometres north of Toronto. For more, visit algonquinpark.on.ca.

Mischa removed by police: Reports

EMERGENCY Mischa Barton was allegedly removed from her West Hollywood home Wednesday by police, usmagazine.com reports an LAPD spokesperson as confirming.

"We responded to her home last night on a medical issue," Officer April Harding tells Us. "We assisted with it. She was removed from her home."

Harding did not release details on where Barton was taken, citing California privacy laws. A source tells Us Barton allegedly called the police herself after having a "freak out." METRO WORLD NEWS

Divorce approved

WINEHOUSE STRAYED Now we know why Amy Winehouse rushed back to England, abandoning her Caribbean hideaway: It was to get a quick divorce from husband Blake Fielder-Civil, according to media reports.

Court papers show that Fielder-Civil filed for divorce over Winehouse's infidelity. According to the documents, she admitted to cheating in 2008, and the couple haven't lived together since.

The divorce becomes final in six weeks. METRO WORLD NEWS

Kissing overtime

CUDDLY CO-STARS Jennifer Aniston seems to be cozying up to yet another male co-star. She and Gerard Butler have been spending plenty of time together on the set of their new movie, The Bounty — even when the cameras aren't rolling, according to Star magazine.

"After they finish a scene, they stick around so they can hang out with each other. Neither is in a rush to leave," a source tells the magazine. "Jen and Gerard often practice kissing scenes even after the cameras stop rolling. Jen will say, 'I think we need to do that again.' She says Gerard's a great kisser." METRO WORLD NEWS

Jackson's kids his own?

TITO ON THE DEFENSE Michael Jackson's brother Tito has come forward to dismiss any speculation that the late King Of Pop was not the biological father to his three children, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Although none of the children are black, thus not mimicking what you would expect Jackson's children to look like, Tito said that he believes Jackson's youngest son Blanket, seven, looks particularly like his dad.

Speaking to the Mirror, Tito said; "They are all his children. Blanket is Michael's, I can tell. Those eyes don't lie. Them eyes are Michael over again. I see a lot of Michael in him."

What's more, he added that Paris and Prince's white mother Debbie Rowe determined their colouring, He said: "Paris and Prince are Michael's children. Yes they are. Just because they look white doesn't mean they are not his. I have an uncle who is married to a white girl and they have three kids. Two of them are white and one is black." METRO NEWS SERVICES

Simpson struggling post-split

TRY A TUB OF ICE CREAM While Tony Romo is reveling in his renewed membership to the Singles-R-Us Club, Jessica Simpson is having a hard time coming to grips with being dumped a day before her 29th birthday, people.com reports.

"Jessica was really blindsided," says a Simpson family friend. "She's sad, mad, and confused. Her emotions are all over the place."

Another source close to Simpson tells People that "it's been difficult lately" for the pair, who first started dating in November, 2007.

"Dating her comes along with her celebrity and press — that's not easy for anyone," says Simpson's family friend. "But she and Tony seemingly had it figured out. They rolled with the punches and focused on each other. They just lost sight of that at the end."

Since the sudden split, Simpson has been laying low. "She is holding up OK," says the Simpson source. METRO WORLD NEWS

Metro Recipe of the Day

Fettuccine with Broccoli

INGREDIENTS:
10 fresh basil leaves
3 sprigs of parsley
2 scallions
2 small cloves garlic
2 tbsp (25 ml) Dijon mustard
1/4 lb (125 g) softened butter
2 large heads broccoli, to give 1 lb (500 g) florets
1 tbsp (15 ml) olive oil
Salt and black pepper
1 lb (500 g) fresh fettuccine or tagliatelle

GARNISH:
10 cherry tomatoes

METHOD:
1. Put large pot of water on to boil for pasta. Rinse and dry basil and parsley and chop finely. Trim and rinse scallions; finely slice green tops and set aside, then slice white bulbs. Peel and crush garlic.
2. Blend mustard and butter in bowl then stir in sliced onion bulbs, garlic and herbs, crushing against bottom of bowl to release flavours. Set aside.
3. Rinse and trim broccoli into florets. Add oil, salt, pasta and broccoli to boiling water, return to boil, and cook 4 minutes, or until pasta is al dente.
4. Meanwhile, rinse and halve cherry tomatoes.
5. Thoroughly drain pasta and broccoli. Quickly melt flavoured butter in pasta pot. Return pasta and broccoli to pot and toss gently in butter over moderate heat until pasta is well coated; do not allow to fry.
6. Transfer pasta onto serving platter, season and garnish with scallion tops and tomatoes.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
Sudden good news will cheer you up immensely and may even convince you that things are not as bad as you had begun to believe.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
As always your advice is spot on and others know they should act on what you suggest — but they won't. Maybe you should leave them to it.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
Mercury, your ruler, moves into the most open and outgoing area of your chart today, which will do wonders for the social side of your life.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
Your thoughts will turn to money matters today and by the time the Sun leaves your sign on the 22nd you will have come up with a cunning plan.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
You will find your voice today. If anyone was wondering what it is you believe in they won't be in the dark much longer.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
You may think you have good reason to believe that some individuals are up to no good but don't make a song and dance about it.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
Even if you do win some people over they will most likely change their minds again tomorrow.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
Your chances of success will increase dramatically as cosmic activity around the midheaven angle of your chart focuses your mind on essentials.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
You may have kept out of the limelight of late but as from today you will feel more positive about facing the world again.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
No one doubts your strength of character, but you will need more than that over the next few days.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
It may be tedious having to explain what it is you expect of people, but not everyone possesses your flair for big ideas.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
A small change in your working routine now could have massive benefits later on. Do what's right for you, not other people.
